Section 2 of the guide: Your currency against the dirham: what to know before you transfer money to Dubai

An example with numbers

Consider an apartment priced at AED 1,000,000. At the fixed rate, this is about USD 272,300 (1,000,000 divided by 3.6725). To know what this costs in your currency, convert USD 272,300 at the exchange rate on the day of conversion.

In other words, for an apartment costing one million dirhams, every 1% move in your currency against the dollar changes what the property costs you by about 1%. This is the equivalent of roughly USD 2,700, up or down. This is just arithmetic to show the scale, and it does not assume any direction for your currency. For real numbers, check today's rate and the rate your bank actually gives you.

> To find out how much money you need to convert in total, including fees and commissions, first work out the amount in the buying costs calculator.
