Section 4 of the guide: Pushy salespeople in Dubai: how to protect yourself

What to do instead

Written by Usama Haj Yahia, founder of U810 Properties | Last updated: 18.11.2026

- Ask for technical details in writing, by email or message, not on a call.
- Check the escrow account details yourself in the official Dubai REST app, rather than taking them from a call. The four-step checklist.
- Do not sign anything during the same call. A good offer will still be there tomorrow.
- Do not close with a developer's salesperson without the person who represents you. A developer's salesperson represents the developer, even when the conversation is warm and personal.
- If you have already signed, go to management right away and ask to cancel, in writing. It worked for me, but whether you can cancel depends on the contract and the stage, so it is better not to sign in the first place.

The full guide on the site: u810properties.com/en-guide-sales-pressure

Got an offer under pressure?

Send it to me before you sign, and we will go through it together.

Send a WhatsApp message →

This is my own experience. It does not replace legal advice or a review of your specific contract.